

GOUGAR FAMILY
TO CELEBRATE CENTENARY

A hundred years ago, August 31 William and Katherine Gougar settled with their family in the Hickory creek district. A celebration of this event will be held next Sunday by the children of the fourth and fifth generations.

The old homestead at Gougar's crossing on the Lincoln highway, now owned by Mrs. Gertrude Gougar, widow of Lewis F. Gougar, will be the scene, according to plans which are nearly completed.

Families of the first settlers' descendants will meet at the homestead at 11 o'clock to make a pilgrimage to the graves of the pioneers, at Oakwood cemetery, Joliet. Decorations will be placed and an address made by David Gougar, now resident on the Gougar homestead.

Luncheon will be served immediately upon the return from the cemetery. Following this, a short program will be given by the children of the fifth generation: Wm. King, Jean King, Wm. Wilson, Chicago; Joseph Gougar, Mary Ann Allen and Mary Jane Gougar.

A marker will be unveiled at the homestead at 2:45 o'clock by four of the children.

Walter B. Gougar, presiding, will introduce the first speaker, Miss Nellie Gougar, who will read a history of the Gougar family since its arrival in America in 1836. Miss Gougar has spent much time in the last three years in research and compiling of this manuscript.

The dedication address will be given by Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch of Evanston, a grand niece of the pioneer.

Friends of the family who wish to attend the dedication will be welcome. The remainder of the afternoon will be spent socially. Mrs. Gertrude Gougar, assisted by her family, will be hostess to the relatives at a 5 o'clock dinner.

Members of the third generation, many of whom having children and grandchildren, are as follows:

David Gougar and his sister, Elizabeth Gougar, on the old homestead; Mrs. Mary Allan, also residing on the old homestead; Hattie and Eva Gougar, 107 Mound St., Joliet; H. W. Gougar, New Lenox; Nellie Gougar, New Lenox; J. W. Gougar, Manhattan road; Frank Gougar, Tacoma, Wash.; Elizabeth and Katherine Gougar, San Diego, Cal.; Walter Gougar and his sister, Mrs. Thomas Stout, both of New Lenox; Louis Wilson of Spencer, a cousin and his brother John Wilson, Geo. and Harry Gougar of Denver, Colo.

Five generations of the Gougar family have lived in the old homestead. Little Mary Ann Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Allen, was born there just two and one-half years ago. Her young mother was Miss Mary Gougar before her marriage. Consequently the present residents of the homestead include both the fourth and fifth generations.

Lewis F. Gougar, well known as a public spirited citizen, died January 24, 1926, at the age of 73. His widow and daughters, Miss Elizabeth Gougar, who is a teacher of mathematics at Fairmont school, Mr. and Mrs. Allen, little Mary Ann and David Gougar, who manages the farm, are the present happy residents of the comfortable two ancient dwelling.

The family still possesses the yellow old parchment deed received from the government in 1839, after having given the usual nine years' notification of their intentions in 1830. The deed is made out to Wm. Gougar, who was the first Gougar to come to Illinois. His father, George Nicholas Gougar, who came to America in 1736, lived in Pennsylvania. He was the head of the American branch of the family.

William Gougar, his son, left the east in 1817, and came west. He lived some time in Ohio, and another period in Indiana, before he arrived at Hickory Creek in 1830. This was the beginning of Yankee settlement at Hickory Creek, which for some time was the beginning of the little "Joliet" that sprang up later.

Joliet Airport
Opens Sept. 6th

Joliet's municipal airport, located four miles west of Joliet on the Barr Highway will be dedicated Sept. 6 and 7, during which time an air show will be given under the direction of Major Reed Landis and Major Lafeton Whitney.

The new airport costing more than $500,000 is declared to be one of the finest in the middlewest.

Parachute jumping, acrobatic flying, balloon bursting and a huge fireworks display during the night flying will form a part of the program in connection with the dedication ceremonies.

The parachute jumpers go up in airplanes to an altitude in excess of 1,000 feet and then while the plane circles the field they jump out gauging their jump and steering their parachute in order to land in a mark on the field in front of the spectators stand.

More than 60 entries from crack flyers, parachute jumpers have been received for the Joliet meet.

Two large Tri-Motored Ford airplanes will be on the grounds to carry passengers at a penny a pound.

Dr. Ickstadt has resided in Tinley for the past 11 years and has made many warm friends who regret to see him leave but wish him much success in his new field.

Triangle Notes

Hello Folks!

Sorry to disappoint you folks, who follow our news last week. Try not to miss again.

The "singles" golf tournament has at last reached its end. "Hail to the King", Walter Mesenbrink, who played brilliantly on the last thirty-six to cop. His name is being handsomely engraved on the "neat" trophy as the first to win this great event of the Triangle Club.

This trophy must be won three years to be in a permanent possession. Well, he's one up on the boys. Here's a tip to some of you who wish to compete next year for this trophy. The person must be a member six months before the tournament takes place to be eligible.

Don't wait too long!

A big banquet will be given in honor of winners of the singles and team play tournaments. This will take place on Friday August 29. The team play winners were Edwin Hug and Marcus "Mickey" Klepper. What a combination on the links.

Members! There's a big meeting on the second Monday in Sept. Do not fail to appear.

A "weenie roast" was held on Monday August 25th in Boyer's Woods. Very few members appeared. Must have had a "bad" week end. Sorry, you missed a good time.

A big dance will be held some time near Halloween by the club. Remember last year's dance? This is even going to be greater. More details later. See you next week.

Legion Notes

Committees of the Post are busy planning for the public installation of officers for 1931. This will be more or less of a celebration of the very successful year that the Post has had and of the new Legion year which is hoped will be even more prolific in results. The District Commander has been invited to act as installing officer. Other distinguished members of the Legion will be guests of honor. Good music for dancing will be provided and there will be refreshments.

The public is cordially invited to attend this event which will take place on Saturday, Sept. 27.

The Adjutant is ready to receive applications for 1931 membership. Two have joined already—one renewal and one new member.

A party composed of Vice-Commander and Mrs. George Rowden, Commander Hoar, Finance Officer Wallin Adjutant Paul Griswold and Mrs. Ray Brennan visited the latter's husband at Dwight hospital last Thursday evening. Comrade Brennan is greatly improved in health.

Harry F. Flannery, a member of Carson, Prie, Scott Post of the Legion and also the V. F. W. is a new resident of our village.

The annual election of officers of the Post will be held on Monday, September 15.

The August meeting of the 4th District was held at Blue Island on Thursday, August 28.

Automobiles Crash

The junction point of Route 49 and the Lincoln Highway near Matieson was the scene of an auto accident when a Chevrolet sedan driven by John Mayer of Gilman going south on route 49 crashed into a Hudson coach being driven east on Lincoln highway by Walter Bettenhausen of Frankfort. The occupants of both cars were cut and bruised and were taken to the St. James hospital Chicago Heights for medical attention. Both cars were badly damaged.

WHAT NAME
MOKENA MEANS

For many years it has not been possible to learn just why Mokena bore this Indian name, nor what the meaning of the name is. When and why Mokena was so named, has been lost in the maze of the years that have passed since this village was first settled, as far back as 1831.

Recently while Milton Krapp of the Mokena Hardware Company, was doing some plumbing work for Mr. Meigs, wealthy Midlothian man at the latter's summer home at Lac Du Flambeau on the Chippewa Reservation, Flambeau Lake, Wisconsin, he met many full blooded Chippewa Indians of old Lac Du Flambeau on the Flambeau river. Alex Poupard and Jim Cloud of this tribe were interested in the name "Mokena" and as spokesmen of their tribe, said it was a Chippewa Indian word meaning "gathering". They said that when their tribe was called on the war path, they would congregate in holes in the ground dug out similar to trenches now in use in modern war times, and these dug outs were known as "a mokena."

The old full bloods still pray to the totem poles and have pow wows as in years long in the past.

It is not an uncommon sight to see Indian women 100 years old dancing in the way their forefathers did. The Indians are allowed to kill deer or other wild game on the reservation at their will, for food. The principle occupation of these people is acting as guides for tourists on these northern lakes.

Wolf Rd. Contract
Thrown out; To Be Relet Sept. 2

Mokena Wolf Road boosters and property owners on this road who have been living in hopes that the Powers-Thompson Company of Joliet would begin work on Wolf road, were given a big surprise disappointment last Saturday when the news came that the entire contract and bids of Powers-Thompson for paving Wolf road had been thrown out as the result of George H. Baker, the State Engineer of County Roads at Springfield refusing to give his approval to the contract on technical objections. The county bond committee immediately readjusted for new bids to be opened in the court house, Joliet next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock and the committee is expecting to award the contract at that time and immediately forward the papers to Springfield so that if they are approved work on the road may start in September.

This makes the third time that the road has been let. It has been turned down twice and the people of Mokena are not believing any promises that this road will be paved this summer until they see the concrete being poured. If bad weather should set in it is likely that the road may not be finished this year. No right of way has been secured south of Mokena from the Hickory bridge south thru the Cleveland timberland to the Lincoln highway and the County Right of way committee says that if no terms can be arrived at with Mr. Cleveland, the property will be condemned for the right of way required. Two condemnation cases for right of way on Maple Road will be tried in the September term of court.

Work on the concrete bridge over Hickory creek south of Mokena is progressing nicely.

ROUTE 51 OPEN
FOR TRAFFIC

The new bridge over the route 51 subway east of Mokena was moved into place by the Rock Island Thursday morning. The bridge had been completely assembled and had a concrete laid on it before it was moved into place by a powerful crane shortly after nine o'clock in the morning. The removal of the temporary bridge and installation of the new was so well timed that the trains were not delayed.

The paving of route 51 at the subway having been finished and set, this highway was thrown open for traffic the forepart of the week.

Opening of route 51 is a big help to Mokena and will do away with a bad detour.

Ask Extension of Mokena Water

Residents and property owners of Mokena petitioned the village board at their meeting Wednesday night to install under special assessment water mains of adequate size on Third Street from the end of the present line at the school building, east to a line on Niethammer street, thence south on this street, thus affording a circulating system and giving water supply for fire protection to the property located on these streets.

John Horas presented the petition on behalf of the property owners. The board has asked Mr. Horas to secure additional signatures of property owners favoring the improvement, and will likely take favorable action on same.

Mokena Banker
Hurt in Auto
Wreck in Iowa

While Everett Cooper, assistant cashier of the Mokena State Bank, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Kate Cooper and his sister Miss Celia were motoring thru Iowa on their way to visit with the Howard Gorham family at Lincoln, Nebraska, their car crashed into a boot leggers truck which was standing on the pavement without lights at Dunlap, Iowa. In the crash all were injured, Miss Cooper sustaining a broken bone in her foot. Word of the accident was telephoned to the Gorham family located 150 miles from the scene of the accident and Mr. Gorham made the trip in four hours and took the injured ones on to his home in Lincoln, Nebraska.

The force of the impact pushed the engine of the Cooper car into the front seat.

Federal agents swooped down on the Wm. Bromond place in Oak Forest Tuesday afternoon and made a cleanup proper. The bar was demolished and all the fixtures and all the booze found was carried away.

After the raiders got thru the place looked as tho a cyclone had blown thru it. It is charged that Oak Forest inmates had been getting drinks at this place. Bromond is said to be an influential politician.

Three prizes will be awarded. Much interest is being displayed in the event and a big crowd is expected.

A big open air dance pavilion is to be erected in the forest preserve along 143rd street. A red hot orchestra will furnish the music. A big time for everyone so come.

Mokena Sewer
Action Awaited

The Mokena Local Board of Improvements met Wednesday night, but nothing of importance transpired only a lot of time was spent between the village engineer and attorney making comparisons. Nothing was mentioned as to date of filing sewer matter in court, but which evidently will be shortly. More data may be available regarding the sewer matter in another week or so.

Soon as the sewer matter is filed in court, a battle royal against the sewer will be started by the objecting property owners of Mokena. In the village of Mokena outside of the McIntosh subdivision there are 150 property owners and ninety have signed a petition objecting to the proposed sewer system and lawyers have been retained to represent the objecting property owners in court.

The proposed sewer is the most unpopular measure the board ever tried to pass in Mokena. The property owners in the McIntosh subdivision are just about solidly opposed to the sewer plan.

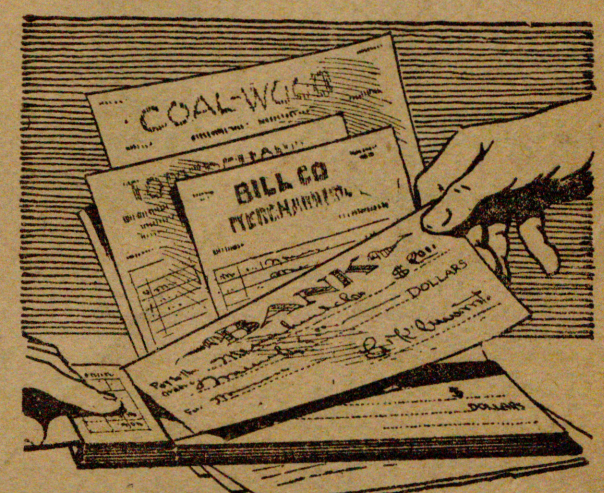

Fake Prohibition
Agents Arrested
At Mokena Groceries

Last Saturday two young fellows posing as prohibition agents were seen searching cars in the Mokena dance grove. Two deputies hired by the Mokena Men's club to watch the dance grove, saw these men as they approached them, they started to run away. One fellow got tangled up in a fence and was caught and other "officer" was apprehended afterward. Both were arrested and charged with impersonating officers and were locked up in the county jail at Joliet. They claimed to be brothers, giving their name Younger, their ages as 22 and 23 years and Humboldt, Ill., as the home town. It is said they have been working on farms around Frankfort of late.

Nicaraguan Canal May Soon Be a Reality

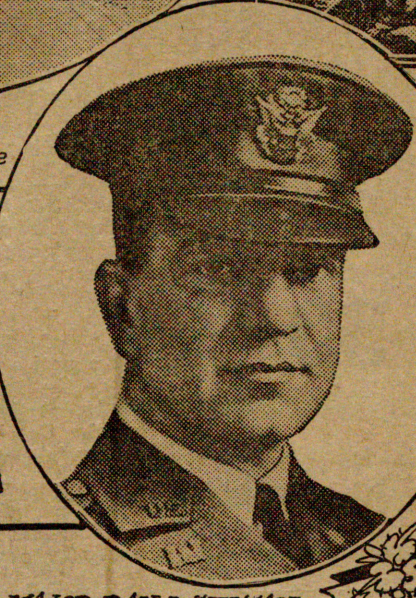

TRANSFERRING SUPPLIES AT GRANADA—All Photographs, Courtesy Army Information Service

CUTTING THROUGH THE JUNGLE

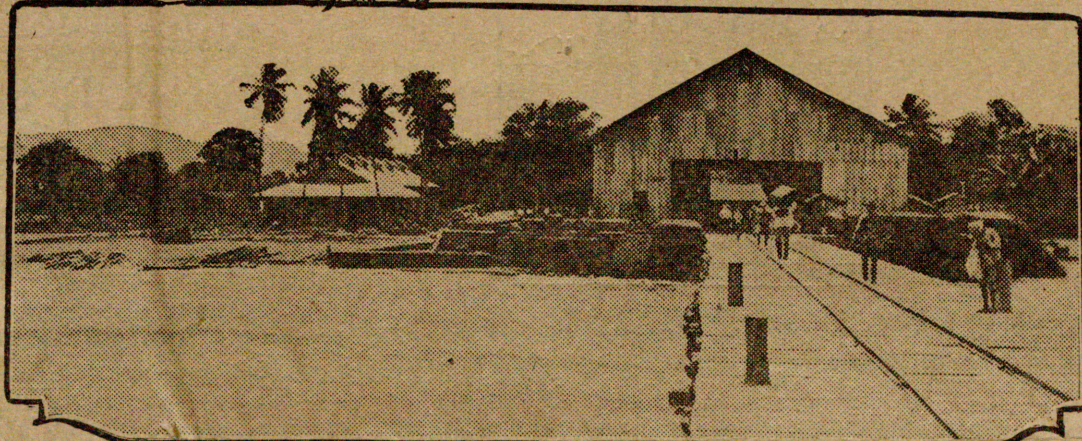

THE PROPOSED NICARAGUAN CANAL

MAJOR DAN I. SULTAN

SURVEYING GREYTOWN HARBOR

THE DOCK AT GRANADA

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ON AUGUST 3, 1914, the first ocean steamer passed through the Panama canal, newly completed at a cost of $400,000,000 and hailed as one of the greatest engineering feats of all ages. Sixteen years later finds the United States engaged in another vast engineering project which is to supplement the "Big Ditch" opened in 1914. Down in the jungles of Nicaragua a force of army engineers, led by Maj. Dan I. Sultan, U. S. A., of Oxford, Miss., is cutting its way through the tropical vegetation of that region and surveying a route for a proposed ocean-to-ocean canal across Nicaragua.

Many Americans, no doubt, will wonder if this additional link between the Pacific and the Atlantic means that there is something wrong with the Panama canal and that those $400,000,000 were spent in vain. As a matter of fact it means nothing of the kind. The industrial expansion of the United States and the greatly increased volume of trade with the Latin American republics have brought about such an increase of shipping through the canal that already engineers and economists are beginning to fear that in a few more years it will no longer be able to accommodate this vast volume. When it was first constructed it was believed that it would be sufficient for our needs for at least a century. Now within one-sixth of that time it is already operating at about 75 per cent capacity. So preliminary work on the Nicaraguan canal is under way in the hope that it will be available for use by the time the Panama canal is running at 100 per cent capacity. Since this latest project will reduce by three days the time necessary for a vessel to go from a port on one coast to a port on another, it seems likely that the construction of this new canal will, so far as it is possible to predict now, solve our shipping problem for all time to come.

There is another reason for the construction of the Nicaraguan canal, which is defensive as well as economic. It will be a strong link in our national defense in that it will provide a supplementary canal which would be available in case anything should happen to the one through Panama. In this age of highly scientific warfare an airplane might drop a single bomb which would render the Panama canal useless for months and this interruption of sea communication between the Atlantic and Pacific coast might easily bring disaster to the nation. Having two canals obviously reduces that danger one half.

As Major Sultan's engineers cut their way through the Nicaraguan jungle their expedition is more than a symbol of the fact that the United States under an engineer President is providing for the future needs of the nation. For the Nicaraguan canal "looks both forward and backward." The expedition is the outward sign that the 400-year quest for a speedy route to the East, which inspired Columbus to sail away into the unknown, still engages the interests and efforts of the nation. That Genoese sailor has been called the father of this project and Balboa, Cortez and other Spanish explorers its godfathers.

If Constantinople had not passed from Christian hands into Moslem possession in 1453, closing the land routes to India and the Orient, the discovery of the American continent might have been postponed for centuries. Since its discovery the search for a shorter route between the two great oceans has been ceaseless. Scarcely a generation has passed since the fourth voyage of Columbus, when natives of the West Indies informed him he was nearing "a narrow place between the seas," that one or another nation has not concerned itself with bridging that narrow place.

Of the early explorers Cortez seems to have been the first who recognized the fact that the "narrow place" was not the strait they had expected to find. His plans to construct a canal by way of Tehuantepec, cut short by the treachery of his followers, were carried on by his cousin, Alvaro de Saavedra Ceron, who submitted plans by four routes—by way of Darien, Nicaragua, Tehuantepec or Panama, the very routes which received so much attention in the Nineteenth century.

In 1567 Philip II had a survey made through Nicaragua. In spite of an unfavorable report, he is said to have presented the problem to the Dominica friars. The friars, even more perplexed than the king, finally quoted the Scriptures to him: "What God hath joined together, let no man put asunder." King Philip therefore decided to abandon all attempts to divorce the two continents.

As early as 1825 we find our own country alive to the importance of an interoceanic canal. This was the beginning of the era of multitudinous projects of road and canal building within our own borders. The following year, the Republic of Central America entered into a contract with Aaron H. Palmer, an American, who unsuccessfully endeavored to organize a company for the purpose of constructing an Isthmian canal. The same year England sent John Bailey to make surveys and to negotiate for a concession. Bailey proposed a route through Nicaragua from San Juan (now Greytown) to Lake Nicaragua and thence to San Juan del Sur on the Pacific. His negotiations for a concession were unsuccessful.

In 1835 President Jackson sent a mission to examine previously proposed routes in Nicaragua and Panama with a view to determining the practicability of the different projects. The results reported were unsatisfactory and in January, 1837, Jackson reported to congress that it was not expedient to enter into the necessary negotiations at that time. The following year the mayor of New York city, Aaron Clark, and others, memorialized congress, recommending that negotiations be opened between New Granada (now Colombia), Central America and the powers of Europe for the purpose of entering into a general agreement for the promotion of a canal to connect the Atlantic and the Pacific. President Van Buren's agent recommended the Nicaraguan route as the most practicable.

The Republic of New Granada in the same year (1838) granted a concession to a French company, whose report was so attractive that in September, 1843, a French officer was sent to investigate. He recommended a canal from Limon bay to the Chagres river, below Gatun, to the Bay of Vacca de Monte. The estimated cost was so high that the project was dropped and the concession was forfeited.

The termination of our war with Mexico, adding California to the Union, and a settlement of the northwestern boundary question, by which the United States came into possession of Oregon, together with the discovery of gold in the new territory, emphasized the commercial necessity for a transisthmian canal. The difficulties, dangers and exorbitant cost of the existing means of transportation aroused the government to action. Ratifications of a treaty granting right of transit across the Isthmus of Panama were exchanged with New Granada in June, 1848. A subsequent treaty with Nicaragua, by which in exchange for an exclusive concession, we were to aid and protect Nicaragua in all defensive wars, failed of ratification in congress.

Later a corporation headed by Cornelius Vanderbilt secured the exclusive right of excavating a ship canal from Greytown to any point on the Pacific. Col. O. W. Childs of Philadelphia, chief engineer for the company, reached a conclusion that a canal by the Nicaragua route was practicable only by following the valley of the San Juan river to Lake Nicaragua, and from that lake a choice of a southwesterly or northwesterly course. His report, completed in 1852, which has been the basis for all subsequent surveys, was submitted to the topographical engineers of the United States army. Col. J. J. Abert and Lieut. Col. W. Turnbull reported favorably on the plan, recommending some changes and modifications. The corporation failed to take decisive action and the contract was forfeited.

The Civil war precluded for several years any further American attempts toward canal building. In 1869 President Grant's first message to congress recommended an American canal on American soil to be constructed by the American people. Congress promptly responded by providing for further exploration. In 1872 a commission was appointed consisting of Gen. A. A. Humphreys, chief of engineers, United States army; C. P. Patterson, superintendent of the coast survey; and Commodore Daniel Ammen, chief of the Bureau of navigation of the United States navy. After a careful survey of the previously proposed routes, in 1876 they unanimously recommended the Nicaragua route.

A French corporation, in which Count Ferdinand de Lesseps, builder of the Suez canal, was a member, was organized. After extensive surveys and considerable differences of opinion, the company finally, in 1879, decided upon a sea level canal from the Gulf of Limon to the Bay of Panama. Another company was organized in 1881 with de Lesseps as its head and work was started. Unforeseen difficulties in the work and troubles in financing developed and in 1889 the company passed into the hands of a receiver, after having excavated some 5,500,000 cubic yards of earth.

In the meantime, 1884, a canal treaty between the United States and Nicaragua was negotiated. While pending ratification in the senate, 1885, it was withdrawn by the President for the reason that the proposed perpetual alliance with Nicaragua was contrary to our foreign policy.

Interest in the project was now extremely active and international in its scope. Each successive year, almost, witnessed the making of a new treaty, the granting of a new concession and the pursuance of further surveys. In 1894 a new French company was organized, which offered to sell its rights and property to the United States. The American commission which had previously recommended the Nicaraguan route chiefly because the price of $109,141,500 set by the French was considered exorbitant, altered their recommendations in favor of the Panama route on January 18, 1902, at a new figure of $40,000,000.

The story of the actual construction of the Panama canal by Gen. George W. Goethals and his assistants is too well known to need repetition here. Suffice it to say that the first ocean steamer passed through it on August 3, 1914, the day that France and Germany exchanged declarations of war. Since then the volume of traffic has become so great that interest in a second canal, by way of Nicaragua, has been actively revived. A treaty with Nicaragua, signed by them in 1914, ratified by us in 1916, secured to the United States exclusive rights in perpetuity for the construction of such a canal through Nicaragua.

In the fall of 1929, pursuant to a congressional resolution, a battalion of engineer troops of the United States army, consisting of three companies, a headquarters and a service platoon, was sent to Nicaragua in September. Two others, one from the First engineers at Fort DuPont, Dela., a second from the Twenty-ninth engineers, at Fort Humphreys, Va., arrived there early in November. In all, there are some 242 men and 25 officers on this duty.

Their duties consist of bringing the old surveys up to date and to make such additional surveys and scientific investigations, within the two-year period allotted them, that should our government at some future time decide to exercise its privilege, construction may be started with a minimum of delay.

Gifted Chinese Artist Scorns Use of Brushes

We sometimes see an artist with long, tapering fingers, and we are reminded of the expression "artistic hands." In China there is a man who not only possesses artistic fingers, but who actually uses these fingers in the paintings he does.

Kwei Teng, a Chinese artist, scorns brushes and ordinary drawing tools—his hands provide him with everything he needs. With his nails he draws his pictures, and then with his sensitive fingertips he puts on the required colors!

The work of this strange artist was recently exhibited in New York, and met with great admiration—tempered with a goodly amount of curiosity! People found it difficult to believe that good results could be obtained by such primitive methods, but they came away from the exhibition entirely converted.—Montreal Family Herald.

Train Night-Flying Birds

A race of night-flying pigeons is being developed under supervision of the War department. Soon after the World war the United States army signal corps started to develop these birds, realizing that they would be of invaluable service in case of war or in time of great national disaster, such as floods, cyclones or earthquakes. At the army signal school at Fort Monmouth, N. J., there is now a loft containing only night-flying birds. These are the result of careful training of homing pigeons, selection and breeding of the most intelligent, the sturdiest and those that had habitually flown in twilight or darkness.

Edward, age four, lives in a double house on the east side. Mr. Mc—, who lives on the other side, bought a new car recently. Edward got quite a thrill out of this, and early in the evening, after the car had arrived, he ran to meet his father with, "Daddy, the Mc—s have bought a new car! Mr. Mc— is on the porch, and he'll tell you all about it!"—Indianapolis News.

Queen's Refuge for Sale

The state of Gadgirth, near Ayr, where Mary Queen of Scots is said to have sought refuge for a night, when fleeing from the battle of Langside, is being offered for sale. It is one of Scotland's oldest historic properties. For centuries the estate of Gadgirth was the home of the Chalmers, the great chamberlains of Scotland, from whom the famous divine, Doctor Chalmers, is said to have claimed descent. John Knox, who was a close friend of the family, dispensed the sacrament there.

Will Stage Wedding at Peetone Fair

Fred H. Carstens Sec. of the Will Co. Fair, wired Ernie Young, famous producer, asking if he would produce his wedding number for the night of Sept. 4, 1930. The Will Co. Fair and Mr. Young had back he would be very glad to produce this beautiful, unusual and impressive feature, if Mr. Fred H. Carstens, the secretary, would guarantee to furnish a prospective bride and groom and a minister.

The local merchants have already promised to donate presents of every kind to the bride and groom and in addition to this the fair association will give $50 in gold to the first couple applying and accepted, who contemplate entering into the bonds of matrimony.

Considerable newspaper space has been given to weddings of royalty in England, France, Germany and many other European countries and many weddings of prominent society people of New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and the movie colony of Hollywood which have created world-wide comment due to the elaborate preparations prior to this or that wedding, but this is the first time that a producer has conceived the thought of costuming a wedding, writing a special wedding song, backed up with gorgeous scenic background, with flower girls, maids of honor, bridesmaids, all singing a massed chorus ensemble wedding song. And this is the first time in the history of any wedding that such elaborate plans have ever been made. And the couple selected by Mr. Fred H. Carstens, the Secretary, should feel highly flattered as it will be an occasion that will be remembered for years and years to come, not only by the bride and groom and attendants, but by every person who is fortunate enough to witness this beautiful and impressive ceremony. And Mr. Young, the creator and originator of this particular presentation, has been asked to attend on that evening, in person, and will doubtless be here to supervise this gorgeous presentation.

Here Is Something To Think About

August 22, 1930
Editor, News-Bulletin,
Mokena, Illinois.
Dear Sir:-

A 25-pound stone anchor tied to its feet, a slimy corpse was recently fished out of the Sacramento River. There was a dime in its pocket. A note was left stating the last quarter dollar was being spent for boat hire on the last ride. No work. Starvation ahead.

The number of unemployed Americans today, running into the millions, just about equals the total of our Mexican Amerind (American Indian) population. Many employers prefer the latter because they are docile, will accept any living conditions, and work the same hours as in Mexico.

The Mexican Quota Act passed the Senate over 3 to 1. Chairman Johnson of the House Immigration Committee, which had reported the bill favorably, declared the House stood 8 to 1 favoring it. Yet there were forces powerful enough to prevent its reaching a vote.

Ought not public opinion become vocal herein

Very earnestly,

Conservative Picnic Well Attended

A good time -- and how! That is the way those who attended the Conservative Party picnic Sunday at Blessing's Grove described the day. Attendance was placed at 247, with a good turnout to the evening dance. Everything was donated and the party did not make a dime, according to the committee.

Unexpected fun was provided in the woman's foot race, when a lady lost both heels from her slippers in attempting to reach the ham. Despite the loss she ran in the next race. As a climax, the heels which were found were not mates.

? The Messenger's Question Box ?

Question: How is your present water supply working?

George Kreis -- I have a good supply -- I have my own well and pump. There are water pipes in front of my house, which are commonly used by jack rabbits for a swimming tank.

J. E. Prather, McIntosh subdivision -- It is good. We have had plenty of water all summer.

Frank Lilly, Midlothian Gardens -- There was none when I left home yesterday morning and none when I returned. It does not seem possible that anyone is using a hose just after the heavy rains.

W. R. Schallerer, Robinson's -- We have the best water on earth -- the only trouble is that there just isn't enough of it.

Tax Levy Ordinance Is Passed

A tax levy ordinance in the sum of $7820 was passed by the Midlothian Village Board at their regular meeting Tuesday evening. This will be the sum collected by the county treasurer for village purposes on the 1930 assessment.

Another ordinance was passed placing a two mill tax against the property in the village to be used for the purchase of fire equipment. This tax was authorized by a special election this spring.

The building ordinance is still under consideration. Trustees Sidel and Kreis were absent.

At the preceding meeting of the board of Local Improvements, Mr. Consoer reported 5000 feet of grading and 5000 feet of sidewalk completed. The engineers were voted payment on half of their five per cent fee on the assessment.

Jebbens inquired about the joints in the sidewalk, which he claimed were not cut through on the first 3000 feet. The engineer promised to investigate and said that the specifications called for cutting through every five feet.

On motion of Burns, seconded by Robinson, Fred Mills was engaged as inspector of sidewalk construction, providing the engineers find him qualified.

Clarence Zuchelkowsky asked that the board take some action on the park. Attorney Harper was instructed to draw up a resolution creating a park board for the village.

Bremen Township Health Topics

Eleanor Gallagher, R. N.

We want to remind all the mothers that the Welfare Station has moved once more; it is now on the corner of Central Park ave. and 146th st., in the house recently taken over for an office by Arthur I. McIntosh.

We trust the change in location will not cause any of the mothers to fail to come to our next conference which will be Tuesday, September 2nd from 10 to 12 a. m.

We have been informed that diptheria is quite prevalent in Harvey and that several deaths have already occurred there. We would urge all mothers who have children under ten years of age who have not been immunized against diptheria to have this done as soon as possible.

FOREST RIDGE GARDEN CLUB

The Garden Club of Forest Ridge held their fourth Power Show, Aug. 23rd at the Forest Ridge school. This was one of the largest and finest shows ever held in this district with over twelve hundred entries of high quality from a widely scattered district.

The outside living room put on by the Garden Department of the Forest Ridge Woman's Club was most attractive, as was the realistic rock-bordered pool with its artistic plantings banked by groups of interesting houseplants and surrounded with colorful reed furniture. This made an ideal background for the tiny dancers-Betty Reynolds and Charlene Ross representing a brown thrush and a butterfly-Gloria Olsen a ballet dancer and Rosalie Koch an Irish colleen who danced around the pool and in and out among the plants. Mrs. I. Roelle, accompanist.

Much credit is given to Mrs. Chas. E. Smith, president and Mrs. A. W. Travis, chairman of the show with her co-chairmen Mrs. W. St. Germain and Mrs. Ed. Sharp backed by the loyal help of all the members. The enthusiastic visitors testified to the success of their efforts.

The best luncheon table, won by Mrs. Thorsen, the best breakfast table by Mrs. Rose Laramie and the best special occasion table by Mrs. R. Hodgman. Each will receive a Dorothy Perkins rose. Mrs. E. S. Travis received first prize on a fernery of mixed plants and will receive two hydrangeas. Mrs. Harry Clark received first prize on her window box and will receive two tamarix. Mrs. Fred Hoch had the best collection of zinnias and will receive 100 tulip bulbs donated by the Barnard Seed Co. Mrs. E. S. Travis' Japanese shadow box received first place and received tulip bulbs from the Henry Field Seed Co.

The grand sweepstakes prize of an unusual cactus garden donated by Herman Schiller the Florist was won by Mrs. E. S. Travis with 157 points to her credit. Mrs. J. Sackman came first with 95 points and received a $3 bank account given by the Trust State Bank of Blue Island. Mrs. J. Berg won second prize a Festina Maxima and Sarah Bernhardt peonies; Mrs. Ed. Sharp won a large coteaster; Mrs. W. St. Germain, a Van Fleet rose and Mrs. Hoch a Paul's Scarlet Rose.

Of non-members Mrs. Wm. Funk received first prize, a bank account donated by the First National Bank of Blue Island; Mrs. Stoples won the beautiful floor lamp donated by Kline's Department store; Mrs. Napier president of the Blue Island Garden Club received third--a large coteaster; Mrs. Brinkman a Van Fleet rose and Mrs. Rudd a Paul's Scarlet rose.

Mrs. S. G. Ohrvall, chairman of the Spring Flower Show also announced the list of winners at the earlier show.

The Girl Scouts will receive a special award of $1.75 donated by the spring Flower Show committee. The judges were Mrs. R. A. Napier, Mrs. Hug, Mrs. Funk, Mrs. Kendall, Mrs. Meyers, Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Korten.

Beautiful baskets were entered by the Mokena Garden Club and the Tinley Park club. Mokena received the first prize and Tinley Park second prize.

The children made a splendid showing with 355 entries, several interesting dish gardens, some excellent scrapbooks besides flowers and vegetables grown by the children. Mrs. W. St. Germain in charge of this work announced the prize winners and the children selected their prizes. In the gardens, winners of first place in different classes were: Glen Berger, Lucy Trompey, Ruth Stoples, Margaret Ray, Florence Davis, James Rudd, Junior St. Germain, Raymond Hall, Second place was won by Clarke Ward, Jerry Gray, Arthur Gray, Mary Frances Smith, Rosalie Koch, Ohrville Hires, James Rudd, Frank Gilbert Smith. Midlothian Legion Notes

An Explanation of World War Veterans' Act

(Editor's note—this week we are continuing the explanation of the amendments to the World War Veterans' Act as amended May 29, 1928 and signed by the President on July 3. The preceding article appeared in our issue of August 15.)

Section 12 of the Bill amends section 201 of the Act by making sure that all dependent mothers and fathers will receive the full allowance regardless of the amount that is being paid now to the widow and dependent children. Under the present law, the total paid to all dependents cannot exceed $75, and in some cases the parents do not receive the full amount. Section 12 of the Bill also amends Section 201 by allowing the payment of funeral expenses and transportation of the body to the home of the veteran, or veterans otherwise entitled to this allowance who may die in the National Soldier's Home. This Section also amends the law, furnishing a flag regardless of the cause of his death.

[If you have cases where both parents are receiving less than $30 have the case reviewed under the amendment to Sec. 201. Transportation can now be allowed for the shipment of the body from a National Soldiers' Home to the place of burial.]

Section 113 of the Bill amends Subdivision [3] of Section 202, and provides an additional $25 per month independent of any other compensation to veteran who have suffered an injury resulting in the loss of the use of a creative organ, or one or more feet or hands as a result of an injury received in the Active Service April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1919. This Section also takes care of the cases of veterans who served with the U. S. Military Forces in Russia, and the time limit on these cases is April 1, 1920. Section 13 of the Bill also amends Subdivision [5] of Section 202 making it unnecessary to show that the veteran is in CONSTANT need of a nurse or attendant in applying for additional allowance of $50 per month.

If you have any cases affected by the first amendment, ask that the case be reviewed under amendment to Section 202, Paragraph 3. The determination or need for a nurse and the dependency of relatives is determined by the Bureau from year to year.

Section 14 of the Bill amends Subdivision [7] of Section 202 and discontinues payments in all cases of hospitalized insane veterans where there are no dependents as soon as the estate equals or exceeds $3000. Section 14 of the Bill also contains an amendment directing that a minimum rating of permanent partial 25 per cent be included in the Bureau Rating Schedule for Arrested Tuberculosis.

[This does not interfere with the payment of the statutory award of $50 a month, but means that Arrested Tuberculosis cases, Service connected, must be rated at least 25 per cent permanent.]

Section 15 of the Bill authorizes the hospitalization of contract surgeons who served overseas in the Spanish-American war and he does not receive compensation under this section unless he shall first surrender

UNDER the non-skid tread of these famous Firestone Tires is a double breaker of two plyies of cord fabric anchored in cushion rubber. This special construction absorbs road shocks — protects against punctures and blowouts — provides the foundation for the thick, tough tread with deeper grooves — giving longer non-skid wear.

OTHER makes of tires have only a single breaker of old-fashioned square woven fabric which Firestone discarded when they developed the balloon tire. Some makes do not have any breaker at all. The Firestone Tire is set apart as an "All Cord Tire".

Don C. Hall Says--

The responsibility for extravagant and seemingly unnecessary expenditures in Political campaigns rests largely upon the Party managers who insist that there must be opposition, that the ticket must be filled, even though the presentation of the "space fillers", "forlorn hopes" and "goats", injected, make it necessary for some worthy, or unworthy but obviously to be successful, candidate to go out and expend time, energy and money for "spell binding" purposes, always with the confronting possibility that some junketing, investigating committee may place the stamp of condemnation on their activities and expense account.

This crazy headed desire to "maintain the prestige of the great party" by putting up a "full ticket" in the face of almost certain defeat often leads to the sacrifice of some of the most capable characters in the official life of the country.

A remarkable and deplorable instance of this foolishness on the part of those in the political field whose business it is to "keep things going so that they may get theirs" is the injection of the name of James Hamilton Lewis, whose honorable record needs no defense, as a sacrifice candidate for the high office of United States Senator, making it necessary for a still further possibly sufficiently large expenditure of funds as to arouse the suspicion of those who are already complaining of the "waste of wealth" in the Primary campaign of Ruth Hanna McCormick.

The successful outcome of the candidacy of Mrs. McCormick has been a forgone conclusion at least since her defeat of Charles S. Deane in the recent Primary "scrimmage", and taking into consideration the evident fact that no effort is being made or was ever intended to be made, to advance the possible interests of her opposing candidate, the graceful thing to have done would be to withdraw the name of the venerable and undoubtedly worthy citizen and statesman from the ticket, allowing Ruth to keep in touch with Washington affairs and to engage in reflection of the arduous task soon to be hers, that of matching the female mind with the wits of the Hoary headed sages and Patriarchs of the "most profound deliberative body in the world", while James remains quietly in the peace and harmony of private business life, proud in his glory of past achievement and present usefulness, "start to finish, fight or get out."

To Celebrate
Gougar Centenary

John Gougar, son of William, bought 80 acres of the beautiful land at $5 an acre. Another part of the farm, 160 acres which includes the site of the homestead, was bought by his two brothers, John and Nicholas, in 1856. Later John bought the 80 acres owned by Nicholas at $12.50 an acre. This was the parcel that included the place of the present hard road of Lincoln highway, the Rock Island, the Michigan Central railroads, and the tract in Senator Barr's subdivision.

The 80 acres north from the house were bought in 1830, from the canal lands, by John Gougar, who paid $1.25 an acre, thus getting the entire piece for $100.

Miss Elizabeth Gougar, teacher of "math" at Fairmont school told the other day, how her great great grandfather felt when he arrived at Hickory creek. "He looked to the north and saw fine sturdy woodlands he looked to the south, and there was the rock waving prairie", said Miss Gougar. "Right near was the graceful Hickory Creek, and from every point it seemed to be the most beautiful and suitable country he had ever seen."

Thirty acres of the land was bought in 1870 at $35 an acre. This tract took in a part of the Woodruff golf links, and the site of the new conservatory.

The first home was built early in the 40's and the upright addition was constructed in 1860. It is an ideal spot in which to hold the reunion with hospitable Gougar hostesses doing their prettiest to welcome visitors from afar, and representatives of the 12 Gougar families resident in Joliet and New Lenox.

Mrs. Gertrude Gougar, head of the home, was a daughter of Daniel Richards, farmer in Jackson township, who came to Will county in 1840, and died in 1910.

Among the choice curios and relics owned by the family, is an enormous German bible 400 years old, with its date engraved on the fly leaf. It is printed in German, beautifully illustrated and decorated. It is bound in wood, covered with heavy, hand tooled leather. It has velvety soft old paper, in good preservation.

One treasure is the ancient replica of a paper chronicling the death of George Washington. Another is an old number of the New York Daily Telegraph, January 20, 1813, "printed every day at noon by Michael Flannagan." Another, a tiny paper, gave a bulletin of the French grand army.

A peace pipe which was dug up when the foundation of the "new barn" was made, was found in the grave of an ancient brave. Also, a hand wrought copper can, held various pathetic articles to help him on his way to the happy hunting grounds. Two tiny bells, a greenish copper pin and the remains of food, were in the can. There was also a sharp stone used to scrape furs. It was an old Indian cemetery, probably from a much earlier time.

Famous people have stayed in this home. Augustus Van Horne, brother of Sir William, lived here with the family of John Gougar, from his childhood until he became a young man. He was the son of Cornelius Van Horne, the first mayor of Joliet.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson
Secretary
Illinois Pipe Association

As a main committee to look after relief to farmers hard hit by the recent drought and heat, Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, acting after conference with his cabinet and state officials, has appointed the following: Melvin A. Traylor, Chicago, banker; T. N. Hurley, Chicago, manufacturer; L. A. Downs, president of the Illinois Central railroad; Earl C. Smith, president Illinois Agricultural association; Victor A. Olander, Chicago; Harvey J. Sconce, Sidel, farmer; Julius Postel, Mascoutah, miller and farmer; John M. Crebs, Carmi, banker; Stuart E. Pierson, state director of agriculture. This committee was appointed in accordance with the wish expressed by President Hoover that action be taken quickly.

That the automobile business is increasing in some respects is apparent from the report of Secretary of State William J. Stratton that nearly 40,000 more passenger cars have been registered this year than had been registered by the same time a year ago; also 5,875 more trucks. Passenger cars registered by August 1 were 1,372,717 in contrast to 1,332,802 on August 1, 1929. License fees collected on August 1, 1930, were $17,861,452, which Secretary Stratton says would pay for 600 miles of paving at the price the state now is paying. All of the automobile collections are paid into the road fund. Collections of the corporation department of the secretary of state's office during the same period totaled $3,661,000.

The new Decatur armory will be built by Carl Westberg, Chicago contractor, for $187,985 if his bid, considered the lowest, is approved. The building will contain a large drill hall, with balcony seats at each end, and a spacious rifle range in the basement. There will also be a garage and loading platform in the basement. Quarters for the officers and enlisted men will be provided on the upper floor, and a banquet hall, seating 150, which will be equipped with a stage.

The state department of agriculture has established field headquarters in Springfield for direct service to the apple growers of Calhoun and adjacent Illinois counties. A. W. Cummins, chief fruit inspector of the division of standardization and markets, in charge, will supervise the shipping point inspection service performed by state inspectors, who issue state and federal certificates that show the grade and quality of apples moving to the markets.

American Legion posts winning prizes on Veterans' day at the state fair were: In the band contest, Jacksonville State Hospital band, Legion Post 279, $425; Belleville, $225; South Shore, Chicago, $125. Drum corps contest, Class A—Board of Trade, Chicago, $425; Kankakee, $225; Sangamon Post 32, Springfield, $125. Drum corps, Class B—Macomb, $325; Galva, $175; Herrin, $100. Consolation prizes of $75 each were given to the Peoria bugle corps, Galesburg drum corps, and Morris band. The management gave $250 to the Quincy glee club and $50 each to the Roodhouse band and Orphans' Home band from Normal, not entered in contests, but which added much toward the program of the day.

Approximately two-thirds of those who took civil service examinations April 19, the first under Gov. Louis L. Emmerson's administration, passed the examination, 708 passing and 343 failing. The positions for which the examinations were taken are those of filing clerks, messengers, senior department clerks and senior department stenographers. Subject to approval of their references by the commission, the names of the 708 will be entered on the eligible register in the order of their general average percentages, with the exception that veterans of the World war will be placed first. Various departments, not the commission, make the appointments.

In response to request from the state's attorney of Crawford county, an opinion has been given by Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom that Elks or Moose property used exclusively for lodge work and charitable purposes, with only incidental use for social or club purposes, is exempt from taxation. If the property is devoted in a substantial way to club or social activities, it would not be used exclusively for charitable purposes and thus would be taxable. A vacant lot owned by a lodge would not be exempt. If a lodge hall is used exclusively for lodge work and the rest of the building for other purposes, the lodge hall would be exempt from taxation and the remainder of the building would not, the opinion stated.

A charter has been issued by the secretary of state to the Panhandle Illinois Pipe Line company to do a natural or artificial gas business in Illinois. This company is a subsidiary of the Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line company, which has an application pending with the commerce commission for authority to build and operate a natural gas line across central Illinois. The company has $1,000,000 common stock and its incorporators are Frank Parish, Chicago; Ralph G. Crandall, Evanston, and John R. Nicholson, Glenview.

In pursuance of his plan to help in the relief of communities suffering from the drought and unemployment situation, Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has directed the state highway division to place under contract at once $4,000,000 worth of hard road building which was to have been left over to next year. Insofar as possible, hard road work ordered will be distributed through sections in central and southern Illinois hardest hit. The department will insist that the contractors employ Illinois labor in the sections where the work is done insofar as possible, and that a fair scale of wages be paid.

Visitors to the Camp Butler National cemetery, a few miles east of Springfield, for the past 24 years have found Maj. George W. Ford as superintendent. He will officially retire Wednesday, October 20, at the age of eighty-two, ten years later than is customary because of a special dispensation granted in 1920 enabling him to continue in government service. The life history of Major Ford includes 52 years as superintendent of national cemeteries. Prior to that he served as a soldier in Indian wars, and he tells many interesting stories of those days. Capt. S. E. Sharp, of Fayetteville, Ark., veteran of the Spanish-American war, will be his successor.

The three separate public policy questions concerned in the liquor referendum to be submitted to the voters of the state in November shall all appear on one ballot, according to the ruling of Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom. These questions are: "Shall the Eighteenth amendment be repealed? Shall congress modify the Volstead act? Shall the Illinois search and seizure act be repealed?"

A charter to the Sheriffs' and Police Officers' association of America, with headquarters at Chicago, has been issued by Secretary of State William J. Stratton. The object stated is to organize the law enforcement officers, to better working conditions and to better the enforcement of the laws. Incorporators were P. H. McGee, C. E. Kendall and E. M. Long.

Plans for a $200,000 woman's building at the state fair grounds were submitted to the public at the beginning of fair week and suggestions were invited from those most interested in the plans. The tentative plans call for the building to be located east of the present structure near the site of the old dome building and to be 208 by 260 feet in size, in the form of a hollow square. The domestic science school, which occupies the present woman's building, would be located in the new structure, also the culinary, horticultural and floral departments of the fair. The present woman's building will become an office building, if other arrangement is not made.

In the vocal music contest held at the state fair grounds on the first Sunday of the fair to determine who should represent the Springfield district at the Chicago land music festival, Miss Armeada Woods, of Franklin, won out from among over a score of contestants.

Under the direction of Truman L. Platt, Sangamon county highway superintendent, the first half mile of a new type of road for this section has been completed, on a road leading toward Jacksonville. An old base is first put down on the road, to make the drive as waterproof as possible, after which the sand and gravel are placed on the road and mixed with a scraping process, until the oil, gravel and sand are thoroughly blended. The road is then smoothed off and travel on the highway is expected to solidly pack the roadway into a dustproof, durable highway. Traffic continues during the time of construction.

Success of the contests introduced this year as a new feature for Veterans' day in response to suggestions from the veterans' organizations, has caused fair officials to decide to plan to make this an even more comprehensive feature next year. One feature was the massing of the 450 veterans in the contests for a finale before the grandstand, at the time of lowering the flag.

State and federal governments will spend nearly $35,000 on the work of rip-rapping the Beardstown earthen levee within the next few months. A contract has been awarded to the Missouri River Construction company of Topeka, Kan., whose bid was the lowest of seven submitted. One-third of the cost is paid by the state and two-thirds by the federal government.

Plans for a dam 36 feet wide and 9 feet high at Horse Shoe lake, immediately south of Olive Branch, in Alexander county, are being prepared by the state architect's office. A state game and fish preserve is to be established there. The island is to be seeded to forage to attract ducks and geese during the migratory season.

Senator John T. Joyce, of the twenty-ninth senatorial district, resident of Chicago, who died suddenly and somewhat mysteriously, had completed his second term as state senator and been re-nominated for the coming election by the Republicans.

Judges choosing the healthiest 4-H club members at the Illinois State fair picked two Adams county young people, both fifteen years of age, Miss Marion Strauss, of Quincy, scoring 99, and Marion Kaiser, R. F. D. 4, Quincy, 98.5.

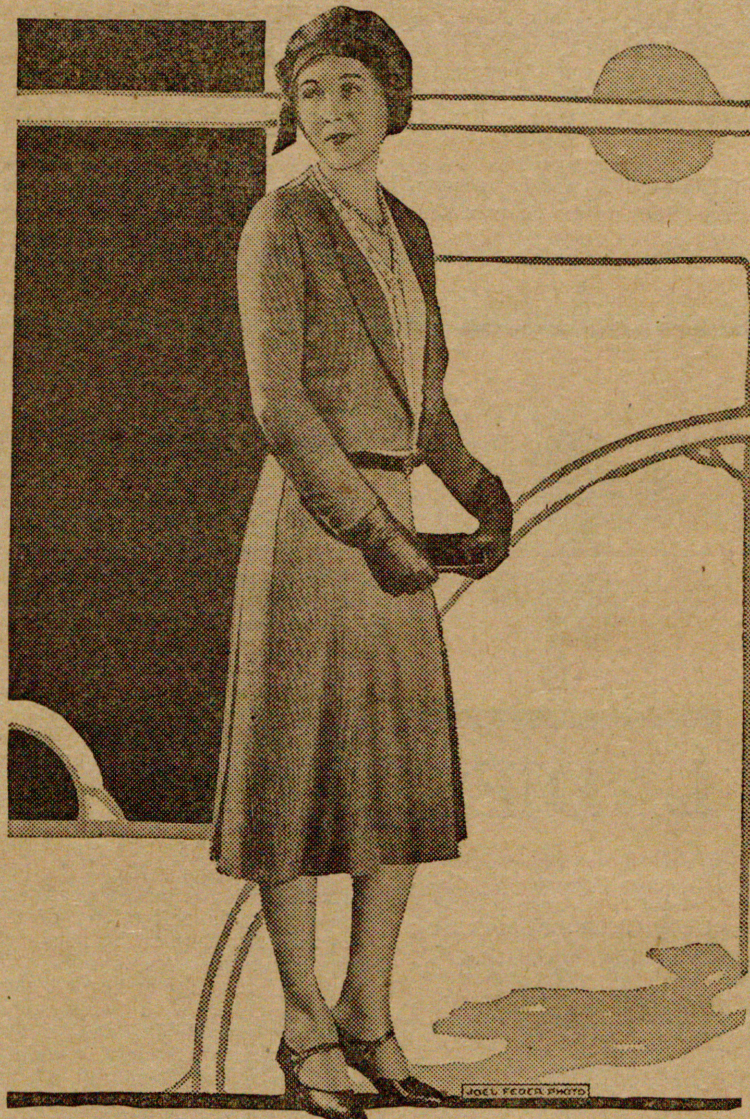

BLACK AND WHITE FOR AUTUMN; BEADED GOWN STAGES COMEBACK

HERE'S how to start the fall season with a flourish of chic that will tell the world you are properly style-minded. The order of procedure is as follows: Acquire a stunning suit of black-and-white tweed, for black-and-white is scheduled to reign it triumphs this fall.

Having decided upon tweed in black-and-white for your initial fall outfit, next to consider is the silhouette. An answer to correct "lines" is given in this illustration of a pert little bolero topping a skirt which flares, thanks to iridescent sequin or paillette, you may be a sparkling rhinestone, a seed pearl, a bit of jet or of strass but this much is certain, whatever your species you are destined to play a dazzling role on fashion's stage during the coming fall and winter months.

All signs point to the forthcoming as a "bead season," bead trimmings on our daytime frocks, and all-over beaded gowns for formal evening wear, little spangled theater, dine and dance jackets with spangled berets its adroit seaming. Please to take note that this skirt fits ever so snugly about the hips, which it must do to comply with the dictates of fashion. No doubt you have been impressed with the extreme simplicity of this suit. The explanation is that it is tres chic to be simple in a sophisticated way.

In this analysis of that which goes to define autumn swank let us next turn our attention to the footwear, the gloves and the chapeau which leads to distinction for the costume pictured. Being black they reflect the very essence of smartness. At all the best booteries they are declaring the prestige of fine, shapely and supple black kid shoes for fall. As to the correctness of black kid gloves for wear with the autumn costume, ask la Parisienne—she knows. The modish little black beret tops this black-and-white tweed suit to perfection. Choose it of velvet, of felt or of chenille.

The tweed of which the bolero and skirt in the picture is styled is of the smooth lightweight variety, but to match merely begins to tell the program mapped out for beads for the season before us.

The touch of sparkling embroidery will enhance many a velvet gown, also those of stately white satin for evening. Shoulder straps of glittering beads will collaborate with low-cut necklines to achieve flattering décolletés.

Our afternoon frocks of satin, velvet, crepe and faille silk, will take unto themselves beaded yokes, beaded collar-and-cuff sets, beaded bandings and beaded motifs of every sort.

Beaded frocks for evening wear assume an entirely different aspect from those of the past. The latest is the gown fashioned of beaded net or chiffon which can be bought by the yard.

Two very beautiful exponents of the formal beaded frock are presented in illustration below. The exquisite princess dress in the foreground just suits the delicate beauty and lovely slenderness of Jeanette Loff, the cinema artist who registers so beautifully all white mixtured woollens are not thus. Some of the newest mannish worsteds are almost shaggy in appearance because of the nubs of white yarn which look almost as if snowflakes had fallen on a dark background. Not only does white tone up black in fashionable autumn weaves but there are other equally as stunning effects, such as dark wine colored woolen flecked with white.

Beaded Gowns Are Back.

Glitter, glitter, little bead, "how I wonder what you are." You may be a gold or silver spangle, an on the screen, that having seen her you never forget her. The bead embroidery is individual. The manner of working the jodice in an all-over patterning with a discreet placement of motifs on the skirt portion goes to show the out-of-the-ordinary character of the newer bead gowns.

A striking creation is the pink georgette gown pictured to the right. It is entirely covered with beads. Bead fringe suspended from the shoulder forms a graceful cape like effect.

FRUIT DISHES

Since science has brought to our kitchens the prepared pectin, which is so easy to use and saves the long cooking and waste in bulk as well as flavor, many of the fruits such as peaches, pears and berries may now be found on our fruit closet shelves to be enjoyed when such fruits are out of season or too expensive to be bought.

Ripe Pear Jam.—Use only fully ripened fruit. Peel, core and crush so that every part is reduced to a pulp. Measure four cupfuls of the fruit (two pounds) and seven and one-half cupfuls of sugar to one bottle of pectin. Mix the fruit and sugar and bring to a hard boil for one minute. Remove from the fire and add the pectin, stir and skim by turns for five minutes to cool slightly to prevent the floating of the jam. Pour quickly and cover with a film of paraffin. This makes about eleven jelly glasses. It sometimes sets slowly. For variety one may add grated lemon rind or spices.

Ripe Peach Jam.—Use only fully ripened fruit, do not peel, remove the pits and crush the fruit. Add one-half cupful of water, two or three cupfuls of fruit pulp, six and one-half cupfuls of sugar and a bottle of pectin. Cook the sugar and fruit to a full boil for a half minute. Remove from the fire and let stand one minute, skim, return and simmer five minutes; bring again to a boil and add the pectin. Remove from the fire, let stand again a minute, skim and pour into glasses.

For the jelly, cook the fruit, drain through jelly bag and to three cupfuls of the juice add two and three-fourths pounds of sugar and one cupful of pectin. Prepare as for pear jam.

Dixie Fruit Cup.—Take one can of grapefruit, one cupful of watermelon balls or cubes and a few sprigs of mint. Chill the grapefruit in the can before opening. Pour the grapefruit over the melon and let stand to blend the flavors. Serve in fruit glasses with a sprig of mint.

Peach Melba.—Take three large peaches, peel and halve them. Line sherbet glasses with strips of sponge cake and place a halved peach in each dish with the cut side up. Fill the cavity left with a small ball of vanilla ice cream, cover with heavy cream, one-half cupful to which one-fourth of a cupful of cranberry sauce and a bit of shredded coconut has been added.

Another Fruit Cup.—Prepare one medium sized grapefruit or use one-half a can, cube two pears, quarter one-fourth of a pound of dates and cut into cubes one-half a cantaloupe. Blend well, adding the dates at the last. Serve very cold.

ANOTHER SANDWICH

Ever since the nobleman John Montagu, fourth earl of Sandwich, called for the double slice of bread with a filling of meat or cheese, the sandwich has been a most popular "quick lunch."

Puree of Sardine Sandwich.—Drain the oil from a large can of sardines. Remove the skins and bones, rub the fish through a fine sieve and to it add one-fourth of a cupful of creamed butter, two finely chopped hard cooked eggs, salt, pepper and Worcestershire sauce to season. Mix thoroughly and spread on sandwich bread that has been spread with mayonnaise. Put together with pairs of the bread spread with the mayonnaise. Cut the sandwiches into three strips, making finger-sized sandwiches, easy to eat and handle.

Melba Sandwich.—Chop the meat peeled from the pits of three dozen large olives. Add one cupful of finely chopped pecan nut meats, moisten with mayonnaise and spread on thinly sliced graham bread that has been spread with green pepper butter.

Green Pepper Butter.—Cut a slice from the stem ends of three or four green peppers, remove the seeds and white fiber and cook until scalded in boiling water. Drain again and rub through a sieve—there should be two tablespoonfuls of the pulp. Cream one-half cupful of butter and add the pulp gradually, stirring well. Season with salt and cayenne. This butter is especially good spread over planked fish or steaks.

Bacon and Eggs Sandwiches.—Spread thin slices of bread with salad dressing to which has been added finely chopped cooked eggs. Cover with thin slices of hot broiled bacon and another slice of bread spread with salad dressing.

Ham Sandwiches.—This seems to be the favorite of all meats for sandwich filling. Chop the ham fine with a little of the fat mixed with it. To one cupful packed solidly add prepared mustard, cayenne. Spread on thin slices of buttered rye bread which has been covered with a thin layer of horseradish.

Mementoes of American

Generosity Still Stand

The Messina earthquake of 1908, in which 90,000 people lost their lives, is probably a hazy memory to those Americans who donated shiploads of food, clothing and medicine, as well as large sums of money.

It may therefore be interesting news to them that their philanthropy lives on after two decades. A new Messina has grown up on the ruins of the old.

There are numerous costly public and private buildings, fine apartment houses and private residences in the new Messina, Sicily's third largest city and a thriving port and railroad center. One whole quarter, however, of Messina is still made up exclusively of wooden houses donated by Americans for temporary shelter.

Mirrors on Golf Club

Sir James Henderson, British scientist, faced with the usual troubles of the golfer, invented a club whose head contained two mirrors to aid him in perfecting his form, and the device has proved so successful that it is being placed on the market in England, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. When the head is placed against the ball the mirrors reflect the light from a lamp set beside the ball. Unless the club is in correct position the light is not reflected from both mirrors.

"I still don't understand," said Fellowes, shaking his head. "You were a nun, anyway?"

"Sorra a nun. Unless ye call me nun that was housekeeper for the Irish Nuns at Lisbon, and that same by token Mother Seraphina that was born Margaret Gilhooley, third daughter to old Squire Gilhooley av the Reeks in County Donegal, would have me come wid her when she tuk the veil for a bit av company and blancher in times she wasn't prayin'. But that was before I got me growth or me appetite, and she, says she, I'd ate the convent out av its funds if I went on. But was I to blame that the dear God give me a stomach above nuns' fare?"

"So you left the convent for Miss Inglepin's service?"

"That I did, and many's the time I've been down on me two shins, thankin' the blessed saints that sint a foine, lovely, young leddy the like av her—"

"But didn't she know you were Irish?" Fellowes interrupted, his suspicions reawakened.

The duenna eyed him shrewdly.

"Not she! 'Twas a Portuguese she wanted. One that knew the way av the country, and Mother Seraphina says, says she, me young leddy wouldn't be satisfied wid—"

"Was that honest?"

"And why not?" snapped the attendant. "How was a chit of a girl to know what was better for her? And I'll thank ye not to miscall me, that's been a good friend to ye, for all yer black scowls, and murderin' rages, and the blood ye've spilt on the right hand and the left."

"I'm sorry," Fellowes apologized, genuinely bewildered. "But you mustn't blame me—"

"Arrah, and 'tis nobody else I'll blame, and me young leddy asettlin' wid the salt tears on her cheeks, all for the way ye misshandled her, wan minit for kissin' and the next for bangin'! Think shame to yerself, sorr, that have spread misery wid yer hate, and won't see love when it comes in yer path, but turn yer back on it, and go off to seek God knows phwat!"

She paused to catch her breath, perhaps to give him an opportunity to answer; but he was speechless, tumbling for comprehension of her words.

"Ah, as shure as me name's Mary McCarthy, that was housekeeper to the Irish Nuns, and for hunger sint out to wait on the swatest young leddy alive, 'tis ye are the fool av the world!" The bendy, black eyes assumed a sympathy at odds with the spirit of the declaration. "God forgive ye, sorr," she went on softly, "do ye have to be told 'tis just yerself she loves?"

"I'm afraid you don't know what you're talking about," Fellowes protested unsteadily. "Miss Inglepin was very fond of Captain Collishaw. He deserved her affection. That's why I feel so bad over his death."

"Oh, my glory," exclaimed Mary McCarthy. "'Tis a babe in arms ye are! Ain't ye got the sinse to know she turned down poor Capt'n Collishaw for yerself? That was why she made such a todo over him—and to her credit. A kind, gentle lamb wouldn't do a hurt to any man, which is more nor the best av them deserve!"

With a strength none would have suspected, she clutched one of Fellowes' elbows, and started to propel him back to front street; but almost immediately she released him.

"Shure ye can run faster nor me that's weighted wid belly-fat," she said. "Go on, lad! Put the spurs to yer flanks, and make haste to her. There's nothin' the like av tears to wipe clane the sorriest state. So be aisy—and on yer way."

He obeyed mechanically. The crowd in front of the Inglepin warehouse had increased in size with the arrival of the governor, and made room for him reluctantly until Doak and Eaches recognized him, and abandoned their reminiscing to brandish musket-butts and bayonets and shout importantly:

"Stand aside, good people! Stand aside for Squire Fellowes!"

Cara, mournful and perturbed, sat at her uncle's desk, Joshua on one side of her, Ben on the other. The governor was stamping back and forth in front of the window, while Sopher orated with keen appreciation of the distinction of his audience.

"—and I can but asseverate once again, your excellency, that as the woman passed me I distinctly heard her say—or possibly 'twould be preferable to employ the word mutter—'Ah, 'tis hungry ye'll be this hour to-morrow, Mary McCarthy!'"

"She'll not be, then," asserted Fellowes.

The four men stared at him in a complex of humors, but Cara cried out spiritedly:

"That she shan't be, and I care not who'd persecute her. Besides, 'tis ridiculous, Mr. Sopher. The poor creature has no English."

"Yet we all heard her speak," Governor Tompkins pointed out temperately.

"She speaks English as well as any of us, your excellency," Fellowes interjected; "but there's no great mystery to it. She was in need of employment; she was told Miss Inglepin would accept only a Portuguese; and lest she should lose her place she pretended ignorance of English. She abandoned her ruse because—because she had her mistress' happiness at heart."

He looked straight at Cara, and after a moment of indecision she let her eyes meet his.

"I owe a debt to Mary McCarthy," Fellowes added gently. "She showed me what I was too blind to see."

The answering light that shone in Cara's face drew him forward a step before he could check himself.

"Humph," grunted the governor. "I must get back to Government house. You might come with me, Joshua."

"Mind if I come, too?" asked Ben. "Glad to have you," answered Joshua, linking arms with him.

In the doorway his excellency paused, and seized hold of Sopher's shoulder.

"You, too," he commanded. "But, your excellency, I am on duty! In charge of Captain Fellowes' escort, and—"

"You come along as Fellowes' attorney," advised the governor. "He'll Here, Rekindled for Him, Was the Subtle Glamour That Had Lured Him From Perenna to Lisbon.

not require assistance here or I miss my guess."

The door closed behind the four, and as if the click of the latch had been a signal Cara rose from her chair. Her eyes were brown pools, flecked with star-glint, and it seemed to Fellowes that he was sinking gradually, gratefully, into the infinite mystery of their depths. Here, rekindled for him, was the subtle glamour that had lured him from Perenna to Lisbon, and from Lisbon aboard the True Bounty, its embers glowing rosier with every breath he drew. He leaned toward her, and suddenly she was in his arms, her lips lifted frankly to his.

"Forgive me," he whispered.

"Ah, dearest—" her fingers stroked his lacerated back—"I have your stripes to answer for, however innocent I was."

"They're but scars," he protested.

"So they're not scars on your memory," she murmured, and nestled closer.

CHAPTER XVI

Mrs. Rhodes Makes Up Her Mind

"Easy, Pete! Whoa, that, Paul!"

Jeff Riggle caught the thong of his whip around the butt, and climbed creakily down from his seat, as the Widow Rhodes emerged from the side door of the General Armstrong into the spring twilight of the inn yard.

"Late as usual," she sniffed. "Ben stoppin' off ag'in to see that hussy daown to Floyd-Jones, hey?"

"Allus b'lieve the wuss of a man, don't ye?" Jeff countered. "Anyone 'ud be late, carryin' the load I did."

"'Tain't noticeable," she remarked, peering into the coach's empty interior.

"Set 'em off back a piece," affirmed Jeff. "Squire's to home."

Mrs. Rhodes became alert.

"Lion Fellowes? Home? Why, ye footless loon! Keepin' all the news back from a body!"

"Naow, naow, M'randy, ye ain't give me time to flap my jaw, I was all sot to tell ye, and—"

"Go on, lummox! Tell me! Has he got his health? Haow'd he do privateer?"

"Done fine. Married."

"Married!" The widow's tone was falsetto. "Aprivateer?" Be ye crazy?"

"Shore, he's married. Thatair Miss Inglepin was up to Chater's. Reck'lect?"

"Waal, I vum," exclaimed the widow. "Guess I better git my bonnet, 'n' hustle up to the Manor. They'll be needin' help more'n likely."

"Oh, they got plenty help," Jeff assured her. "Thatair Portygee Irish—only she ain't Portygee, she's Irish, name o' McCarthy, and talks nigh as much as ye do, M'randy—"

"Huh! I'll thank ye not to be coupin' me with an outlandish furriner the shape of a bar'l of salt pork!"

"Shore," drawled Jeff, "but ye kin say this for a fat woman. She ain't so short in her temper."

"Any woman 'ud be short-tempered with a tight-mouthed nunny hadn't more'n hoss talk on his tongue! Git along, do! Who else come with Squire?"

"Nimrod Sopher. The rest o' the Babylon fellers stayed into the city. Spendin' prize money."

"They would," the widow observed grimly. "Anyone else?"

"That mahog'ny-colored feller, Tom, n' his niggerman—only he ain't Tom's nigger no more 'cause Squire Fellowes—or mebbe 'twas Miss Fellowes—it's kinder hard to make out haow they done it—bought him off o' Tom."

Mrs. Rhodes' eye brightened visibly. "Do tell!" she cried. "Why thatair Tom must have a heap o' money, Jeff."

"But money don't never do a sailor no good," asserted Jeff. "And the best of 'em air uneasy fellers, allus up 'n' away, jest when ye figger ye got 'em tied daown."

"I'd like to see the man, sailor or no, could git away from me, short o' the Heavenly trump," commented the widow.

"Waal, naow, if 'twore me, 'thar wouldn't be no need to keep him from gittin' away," propounded Jeff. "I had it on my mind quite a time, M'randy, to talk things over with ye."

"Save yer breath," advised Mrs. Rhodes. "Did ye hear haow much prize money Tom got?"

Jeff's response was unintelligible and he turned to the task of unharassing his team; but the widow reached out a lean arm, and grasped him to her.

"None o' that with me, Jeff Riggle," she ordered. "Answer my question!"

"Haow'd I know? Ask him yer self."

"As if ye didn't worm into every bill o' news along the road," she scoffed. "Haow much?"

After a hopeless wriggle, Jeff answered sullenly:

"They do say squire give Tom all his share o' the prize money."

"Squire's share? Glory be! But haow much?"

"Four-five thousand dollars."

Her arm fell beside her.

"Land's sake! All that money for a niggerman?"

"Squire 'n' Miss Fellowes air purty fond o' Cuffee."

"Oh, Cuffee's a good nigger! But—All that for him! I vum! And Tom innercent as a cradle babe!"

Her head sank in reflection, while Jeff regarded her more anxiously than before.

"I got a ter'ble hunger, M'randy," he said. "Haow 'bout a snack to eat?"

She didn't hear him. Her eye was scanning the inn structure with a calculating efficiency.

"Mebbe 'twould be a good scheme to change the name," she murmured.

"Ye jest changed it," objected Jeff.

"I know, but the war ain't goin' to last much longer. And folks won't think much o' sojers. 'The Sailor's Rest!' That 'ud be a good one. Kinder appealin', too. Make a man feel to home. Course, we'd need a new sign, but that git fits into any pictur, and a handy man—"

M'randy, ye ain't fixin' to throw me over?" gulped Jeff. "Ye ain't goin' to go 'n' tangle yerself with this leetle, hairy sailor that wont draw two sober breaths ashore?"

"I'll thank ye to keep a civil tongue in yer head where Tom's consarned," the widow retorted briskly. "And I ain't throwin' ye over—thar ain't nothin' betwixt us to throw, Jeff Riggle. Jest 'cause I've let ye order me 'round like I was yer wife, which the dear Lord knows I'd never dream of bein', not while thar was a single other man left able to draw briches onto his legs, ain't no reason why ye should presume to try to boss 'n' bother me. Git along, naow! Unhitch them hosses, 'n' bed 'em daown. If ye want a bite, thar's a ham in the cold cupboard, 'n' fire for a dish o' tea."

"But whar ye goin', M'randy?" he wailed as she started to sail out of the yard.

"Goin'?" Why, of course, I'm goin' to see what I kin do for squire 'n' Miss Fellowes."

"Figgerin' to marry Tom right off?" he snarled. "Mebbe he'll have somethin' to say for hisself."

"He's a sensible man, Tom is," she retorted. "And thar's more to a sailor 'n' thar is to a stage driver."

Bitterness welled up in Jeff's heart. "Yes, and more'n one wife most generally."

"Not if he's married to M'randy Rhodes," the widow returned, undisturbed. "I calc'late to keep a man so busy he won't hanker after sin—which is what I squire 'n' tell Miss Fellowes. Not that squire ain't a decent, young man, but men air men, and all Nimrod Sopher's law learnin' won't change 'em."

[THE END.]

What, Ever?

"Here you are, then," wrote Oliver Wendell Holmes, on the subject of rowing, in the year 1858, "hose you are, then, afloat with a body a rod and a half long, with arms, or wings, as you may choose to call them, stretching more than 20 feet from tip to tip, every volition of yours extending as perfectly into them as if your spinal cord ran down the center of your boat, and the nerves of your arms tingled as far as the broad blades of your oars."

"This, in sober earnest, is the nearest approach to flying that man has ever made or perhaps ever will make."

No Short Cut in Making Good Hay

Side-Delivery Rake Will Improve Quality and Reduce Labor.

The worst obstacle to hay making in New York is the weather, but many farmers beat the weather with modern hay making machinery, according to Professor H. B. Hartwig of the New York state college of agriculture. The typical farmer is afraid of green, sappy hay; so he goes to the extreme of cutting his clover too late rather than too early.

Nutritious Hay Cut Early.

The most nutritious hay is cut earlier than the full bloom stage and thereby retains the green color and the leaves. The color is needed in hay not because the color itself makes meat, wool, and milk, but because of what is normally associated with color, says Professor Hartwig. The same processes that destroy color in hay are the ones that destroy feeding value. Mold destroys feeding value and color. Wetting in the field and bleaching, with the leaf loss associated with it, also destroy the feeding value along with the color.

Clover leaves make up about 30 per cent of the weight of the hay and contain nearly half of the nutrients. Any process that shatters leaves lowers the value of the hay when fed, which explains the tendency to use the left-hand side delivery rake in place of the old type tedder. The left-hand side delivery rake throws a high proportion of the leaves to the inside of the swath where they dry more slowly. It also tends to throw the stems out where the sun can hasten their drying. The right-hand rake will do just as good work but requires a little more bother. With it one should cut the hay in lands, start to rake in the center of the land, and rake in the opposite direction of the mower.

Lessens Labor.

The side-delivery rake does not reduce the time from cutting to storing, but it enables a man to put up more acres with less labor. There is no short-cut for good curing, Professor Hartwig says.

No Difficulty to Find Good Market for Apples

At this season of the year apple growers are generally very much concerned about the proper sale or disposal of their fruit crops. The apple producer who has fine, clean, high quality fruit consisting of standard varieties will have but little, if any, difficulty in finding a profitable market. In fact, such fruit is always in demand and buyers vie with each other to obtain such apples.

There is always, however, a larger quantity of what might be called medium to inferior apples and these are the ones that are the hardest to market. From what has already been said about the apple scab disease and the unfavorable conditions for spraying, the difficulties of the grower in marketing a low grade of fruit may be somewhat worse this year than usual.

No matter what the character of the fruit is, however, it will usually pay to grade it well and to stick to established grades. There is always a market for what is known as cull apples, but the grower may have at least two or even more grades of what is generally termed "culs." For the better culs a higher price may be asked.

Designate Two Cows as Champions of Colorado

Two pure-bred Jersey dairy cows owned by the Colorado Agricultural college have just been declared champion register of merit cows in their classes for Colorado during 1929, by the American Jersey Cattle club.

Certificates to this effect have just been received by Prof. George E. Morton, head of the animal husbandry department at the college, from Lewis W. Morley, secretary of the club.

One of the cows, Campestral Queen, has been designated as the champion register of merit cow, class AA, with a record production of 453.26 pounds of butter fat in 365 days.

The other, Fox's Leora Dewdrop, has been declared the champion register of merit cow, class AAA, for the past year, with a record butter fat production of 394.45 pounds in 284 days.

The college dairy herd is in charge of B. W. Fairbanks, associate professor of animal husbandry.

Farm Hints

Cows milking should be watered at least twice daily at all seasons.

There is some danger of causing udder troubles if heifers are kept overfat, but this condition rarely occurs. Usually they are not carrying sufficient flesh.

If a marked falling off in milk flow is allowed, it is impossible to fully regain the loss, even with the best of feeding later, and a lowered production results from the balance of the lactation period.
